

Freelance position – Interaction Designer at SAP Innovation Center Network

PURPOSE AND OBJECTIVES

The SAP Innovation Center in Potsdam is a dedicated group within SAP that focuses on creating innovative software prototypes, which pave the way for new and potentially revolutionary IT solutions.

For one of our most exciting projects, we are looking for you – an experienced Interaction Designer who likes to work in a buzzing hub of international and very motivated folks with diverse professional backgrounds.

EXPECTATIONS AND TASKS

Translate complex research insights into adequate user experience concepts and craft interaction models, screens designs and fine grained details of user interactions.

Own the success or failure of your design work and collaborate with other designers, developers, and customers on the feasibility of ideas.

You will work in close collaboration with developers, customers and other designers to turn ideas and user needs into an attractive state-of-the-art digital product.

Ideate, create, and iteratively improve user interfaces for our business products.

SKILLS AND COMPETENCIES

We're not looking for the Grand Master Jedi of Design, nevertheless you should bring some years of solid design project experience – including concrete product development experiences. Communication skills and team player qualities are equally important.

Required

- Your mindset: Only the easiest and smartest interaction for every single task is good enough for my customer.
- Proven track record and a passion of designing compelling digital products and services and ability to prototype what you design.
- Excellent communicator of design work and your rationale behind proposals to internal stakeholders and customers.
- Self-starter and team player who can deeply collaborate with engineers.
- Curiosity for the end-users' needs and comprehension for business requirements.
- Strong written and verbal communications skills in English.
